CDTD Welcomes you to TAGS’ First Official Newsletter!

About TAGS

In 2012, Centre for Domestic Training and Development (CDTD) opened the Talia Agler Girls Shelter (TAGS) in Nairobi to meet the needs of trafficked and abused girls from Kenya and neighboring countries. TAGS works through 4Rs to Reach, Rescue, Rehabilitate and Reintegrate girl victims with services appropriate for their healing, recovery and social reintegration. TAGS is named after the late Talia Agler who was an extraordinary intern who worked with CDTD in 2006 when she was a student at American University, Washington, DC.

Our Achievements in 2017

TAGS girls dancing during the recent World Children’s Day on 20th Nov 2017

In rural Africa, it is normal for girls and women to go and fetch firewood in the forest to provide cooking fuel for the family. However, what should have been a normal trip to the forest in search of firewood turned tragic for 16 year old Mary (not her real name). The events of that day will forever reshape to her mind as what happened next changed her life forever and continue to do so until something is done to interrupt her circumstances. How can we transform her life from that of fear and failure to one of hope and success?
